FOREWORD TO THE SUPPLEMENT

The first constituent volume of the Dictionary of Medieval Latin from Celtic Sources was published at the end of 2005 by Brepols, of Turnhout, under the title The Non-Classical Lexicon of Celtic Latinity, I: Letters A–H. Compiled by Anthony Harvey and Jane Power, it drew almost all of its examples from the first, preliminary edition of the project's full-text digital database of sources, the Royal Irish Academy's Archive of Celtic-Latin Literature (ACLL), which had been published on CD-rom in 1994.

Since the appearance of the first volume of the Lexicon, the database of sources has been expanded by some seventy percent and published as a second, developed edition of ACLL. As work proceeds on the compilation of letters I to Z of the Lexicon, all of the texts captured in this ACLL-2, which appeared on line at Brepolis in 2010, are searched as a matter of course for examples of the relevant words. But the texts that have been added to the Archive since the original ACLL-1 naturally also include many words beginning with letters A to H that demand inclusion in a work claiming to describe the non-Classical vocabulary of Celtic-Latin literature. A large proportion of these prove already to have been covered by the headwords and definitions published in the 2005 volume; in such cases the additional instances furnished by ACLL-2 are not cited explicitly here (though they are being taken into account in the preparation of the eventual digital edition of the Lexicon, currently in progress for the whole alphabet in parallel with primary research on the entries for letters I to Z). However, many non-Classical words beginning with A to H were either not present at all in ACLL-1, and so do not figure in the volume published in 2005, or else appear in ACLL-2 in senses that are not provided for in that volume. The purpose of the present Supplement is to fill the gap just described: the result should be that almost any non-Classical Latin word found in the online Archive will be found to have received full lexicographical treatment either in the 2005 volume or here (where non-trivial corrections to the volume will also have been specified).

Meanwhile, for the digital edition of the Lexicon alluded to above, the Supplement's new entries are being integrated into the main work at what are, alphabetically speaking, the appropriate points; and its new definitions for existing headwords are being integrated into the entries concerned. When the digital edition appears it should thus be seamless, in the sense that there will be nothing to distinguish material that was in the hard-copy Lexicon from that which was added by this Supplement.

The Celtic-Latin Word-List, initially prepared in collaboration with the British Academy and published digitally at <http://journals.eecs.qub.ac.uk/DMLCS/wordlist.html> as a catalogue of the entries in the Lexicon, is now also being updated (at the same address as hitherto) so as to make the alphabetic arrangement of its entries prefigure the integrated sequence of these that will eventually be found in the electronic version of the Lexicon itself.

KEY TO SOURCE CODES NEW TO SUPPLEMENT, LETTERS A TO H

All texts new to the second, developed edition of the electronic DMLCS Archive (published in 2010), and so not generally laid under contribution for the first volume of the Lexicon (published in 2005), have been systematically searched for the words treated in the compilation of this Supplement; the following codes identify the works in question. (Texts marked with asterisks were already sketchily drawn upon for the 2005 volume, while those with a suffixed sign ⁰ yielded no examples that have gone on to be used.)
